For three reasons, the argument set forth in the State's memorandum is wrong and 2.7 recklessly risks mistrial and special action. 28 13521059 2 -1-

DEFT'S RESPONSE TO STATE'S BENCH MEMO RE: EVIDENCE OF LESSER INCLUDED OFFENSE

First, the State's memorandum is a red herring, for the evidence at issue is not relevant to a charge of negligent homicide. Evidence pertaining to prior sweat lodge ceremonies is irrelevant to both reckless manslaughter and negligent homicide because, as this Court has repeatedly explained, there is no evidence that any participant at a prior sweat lodge experienced any sort of life-threatening condition. See, e.g., Draft Trial Transcript, 3/25/11, at 60:21–25 (comment from the Court that it would be "very misleading" to ask a witness whether he was warned about alleged incidents at prior sweat lodge). Similarly, the evidence related to corporate risk management principles is irrelevant to both negligent homicide and reckless manslaughter: the State has still not identified a legal duty, has never connected the referenced risk management practices to the deaths in this case, and—particularly in light of the testimony of former JRI employee Melinda Martin—has no possible basis for attributing JRI's risk management practices to Mr. Ray.

Second, even assuming the evidence in question was relevant to a negligent homicide charge, the State's attempt to introduce entire bodies of evidence relevant only to negligent homicide is fundamentally misguided and unconstitutional. A lesser included offense, by definition, is one that "requires no proof beyond that which is required for conviction of the greater." E.g., Brown v. Ohio, 432 U.S. 161, 168 (1977). That is why a conviction on a lesser included offense does not offend Due Process. See State v. Branch, 108 Ariz. 351, 355 (Ariz. 1972). Accordingly, evidence that is relevant to reckless manslaughter is necessarily relevant to negligent homicide, and the State is free to continue to introduce such evidence. But the State cannot, consistent with Due Process, introduce entirely distinct (and highly prejudicial) bodies of evidence that are not relevant to reckless manslaughter in an attempt to prove negligent homicide. This conclusion is reinforced by the fact that the State can obtain a jury instruction on negligent homicide only if negligent homicide is a necessarily included offense in the context of this casethat is, if the evidence submitted in proof of reckless manslaughter could support a conviction of negligent homicide. There is no precedent or legal basis for the State's backfilling attempt to garner a negligent homicide conviction on a distinct body of evidence. To the contrary, this approach is barred by Rule 403, because the evidence is highly prejudicial, and by the Due Process Clause, because the State cannot allow a defendant to be convicted of a so-called lesser included offense that is not subsumed within the proof of the greater offense.

Third, permitting the State to pursue an entirely distinct theory of the crime six weeks into trial would violate Arizona Rules of Criminal Procedure and would be fundamentally unfair. The motion deadline for issues related to the evidence from prior sweat lodges was December 27, 2010. The parties extensively and timely litigated the issue of prior sweat lodge evidence, and the Court issued a well-reasoned ruling one month before trial. Mr. Ray prepared his defense, presented an opening statement, and has examined twelve government witnesses, all in reliance on the Court's ruling. To permit the State, through its endless onslaught of motions for reconsideration, to now transform this into a misleading trial about prior years—prior years where no one faced any life-threatening illness or condition—would violate rules 16.1(b), 16.1(c), and 16.1(d), would be fundamentally unfair, and would be reversible error subject to special action.

II. ARGUMENT

A. The evidence at issue is not relevant to a charge of negligent homicide.

The State's Bench Memorandum appears geared to two bodies of evidence that are not relevant to the charged crime of reckless manslaughter: (1) evidence related to alleged incidents at prior sweat lodge ceremonies, and (2) evidence related to JRI's corporate risk management practices. The State's memorandum rests on the premise that this evidence, while not relevant to reckless manslaughter, is relevant to a charge of negligent homicide. That is incorrect.

The evidence related to alleged incidents at prior sweat lodge ceremonies is not relevant to a charge of negligent homicide for the same reasons that it is not relevant to a charge of reckless manslaughter. See Defendant's Response to State's Motion for Reconsideration Re: MIL No.1, 2/22/11, at 3, 8–11. For starters, the State has not shown and cannot show that the alleged symptoms at prior sweat lodges would signal—to Mr. Ray or to any reasonable person—a substantial and unjustifiable risk that death would result. See Under Advisement Ruling on MIL No. 1, 2/3/11 (holding that knowledge of the alleged pre-2009 symptoms "would not constitute notice that [Mr. Ray] allegedly was subjecting these participants to a substantial and unjustifiable risk of death"); see also Draft Trial Transcript, 3/25/11, at 49:1-6 ("apparently one person in 2005 – 3 – went to the hospital with a none life threatening condition and . . . a bunch of questions implying now there were similar situations in the past would not seem to properly characterize this"); id. at 60:21-25, 61:1 ("to suggest there was anything like . . . what happened . . . 2009 from . . . the evidence I've [seen] would be very . . . misleading. One person went to the hospital over the period of years with a non-life threatening condition"). Nor has the State proffered any evidence that Mr. Ray knew of the alleged prior incident—a prerequisite to the State's argument that a reasonable person in Mr. Ray's position in 2009 would have perceived a substantial and unjustifiable risk that the decedents would die.

Likewise, the evidence related to issue of corporate risk management, and the proposed testimony of Steven Pace, is irrelevant to a charge of negligent homicide. Chief among the State's continued failings in this regard are the lack of a legal duty upon which a crime of omission could be based; the lack of any causal connection between the risk management practices and the deaths that the State alleges Mr. Ray caused; and the absence of any connection between Mr. Ray's conduct and JRI's corporate risk management practices. See Defendant's Motion for Case Management, 3/7/11; see also Defendant's Motion to Exclude Testimony of Steven Pace, 1/24/11.

B. The State is not permitted to introduce evidence that is not relevant to the charged crime of reckless manslaughter.

The State is not, as it complains, "precluded" from "present[ing] relevant evidence pertaining to the lesser-included" offense of negligent homicide. State's Bench Memorandum at 5. To the contrary, all of the evidence the State continues to introduce that is relevant to reckless manslaughter is, by definition, also relevant to negligent homicide. The State is free to introduce this evidence. What the State cannot do is backfill its case with entire bodies of evidence that are not relevant to the charged crime of reckless manslaughter. There is no legal precedent for the State's attempt. And it is prohibited by several independent rules.

&lt;sup>1</sup> In passing, the State mischaracterizes its burden of proof with respect to causation. It is not enough for the State to prove, as it says in its memorandum, that the sweat lodge created a risk of death. The State must also prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Mr. Ray himself caused the three deaths. To date, the State has attempted to satisfy this causation requirement by arguing that Mr. Ray "conditioned" participants to remain inside the sweat lodge. See State's Response to Defendant's Motion to Exclude Audio of Spiritual Warrior Seminars, 2/28/11.

The State's attempt fails because, by definition, a lesser included 1. offense must rely on the same proof submitted for the greater offense.

First, the State's theory is at odds with the definition of a lesser included offense. It is "invariably true of a greater and lesser included offense" that "the lesser offense . . . requires no proof beyond that which is required for conviction of the greater . . ." E.g., Brown v. Ohio, 432 U.S. 161, 168 (1977).<sup>2</sup> This overlap is why the Due Process notice requirement is met by conviction of a lesser offense: the "notice function" of the Due Process Clause "is satisfied if the lesser offense of which a criminal defendant is found guilty is included within the greater crime charged." See State v. Branch, 108 Ariz. 351, 355 (Ariz. 1972). "The test to determine whether one offense is included within another is 'whether the first offense cannot be committed without necessarily committing the second." Id. The evidentiary support for the two offenses, it bears repeating, is by definition the same. See, e.g., Com. v. Mobley, 581 A.2d 949, 953 (Pa. 1990) ("An offense is a 'lesser included offense' if the elements of the lesser offense are identical to and are capable of being wholly subsumed within the elements of the greater offense and the factual predicate for the lesser included offense is part of the factual predicate required to establish the greater offense." (emphasis added)). The operative concept—and the reason conviction of a lesser included offense does not violate constitutional principles of notice and due process—is that the lesser is subsumed within the greater offense. 11.

To be sure, under this standard, "[t]he general rule is that negligent homicide is a lesser. included offense of manslaughter." State v. Fisher, 141 Ariz. 227, 247 (Ariz. 1984). But this general rule is premised on the fact that "the only difference between manslaughter and negligent homicide is an accused's mental state at the time of the incident." Id. (emphasis added); see id. at

&lt;sup>3</sup> In other words, a lesser included offense "must be composed solely of some but not all of the elements of the greater crime so that it is impossible to have committed the crime charged without having committed; the lesser one." State v. Celaya, 135 Ariz. 248, 251 (1983) (citing State v. Malloy, 131 Ariz. 125, 639 P.2d 315 (1981)). See also State v. Dugan, 125 Ariz. 194, 195 (1980) ("An offense is lesser included when the greater offense cannot be committed without necessarily committing the lesser offense."); State v. Wise, 137 Ariz. 477, 479 (App. 1983) ("The test to determine if an offense is a lesser included one is whether the greater offense cannot be committed without necessarily committing the lesser."); State v. Teran, 130 Ariz. 277, 279 (App. 1981) (same).

248 ("The element of the greater not found in the lesser is awareness of the risk."). Thus, in the usual reckless manslaughter case, the prosecution introduces evidence that is relevant to reckless manslaughter, and, if that evidence is deficient on the distinguishing element, an instruction on negligent homicide may be available. As explained more below, the basis for the instruction never lies in a different body of evidence, but rather in a shortcoming within the evidence that proves the charged crime.

Here, the State apparently seeks to prove negligent homicide by relying on evidence not relevant to reckless manslaughter. To wit, the State's theory of negligent homicide apparently turns on alleged prior incidents or corporate omissions. Yet the State's theory of reckless manslaughter is that Mr. Ray somehow deliberately conditioned Mr. Shore, Ms. Brown, and Ms. Neuman to remain in the sweat lodge until the point of death. Setting aside that there is no evidence supporting this theory of reckless manslaughter, it turns on evidence is entirely distinct from the State's theories of negligent homicide. On these facts, it is not the case, as is required for a lesser included offense, that "it is impossible to have committed the crime charged without having committed the lesser one." Celaya, 135 Ariz. at 251. These theories of negligent homicide are thus not lesser included offenses for purposes of the Due Process Clause.

2. The State is not entitled to an instruction on negligent homicide unless the evidence relevant to reckless manslaughter supports it.

Moreover, the State's attempt is improper because it is not until the end of trial that the court will determine whether a negligent homicide instruction is even warranted. In making that determination, the court will not only consider whether negligent homicide is a lesser included offense as described above, but will also address a second, independent requirement—that negligent homicide constitute a "necessarily included offense." That requirement turns on whether the evidence offered by the State in support of the charged crime (reckless manslaughter) could sustain a jury finding of negligent homicide. As the Arizona Supreme Court has repeatedly explained,

Although the terms are often used interchangeably, a "lesser included" offense is not always a "necessarily included" offense for purposes of Rule 23.3. State v. Dugan, 125 Ariz. 194, 195, 608 P.2d 771, 772 (1980). An offense is "lesser included" when the "greater offense cannot be committed without necessarily committing the lesser offense." Id. But an offense is "necessarily included," and so requires that a jury instruction be given, only when it is lesser included and the evidence is sufficient to support giving the instruction. Id.

State v. Wall, 212 Ariz. 1, 3, (Ariz. 2006) (emphasis in original). This additional requirement flows directly from the Constitution: "[D]ue process requires that a lesser included offense instruction be given only when the evidence warrants such an instruction." Hopper v. Evans, 456 U.S. 605, 611 (1982) (emphasis in original).

In conducting the necessarily-included-offense inquiry, it is always the case that the Court examines only one body of evidence: that which has been admitted as relevant to the charged, greater offense. In particular, the court must conclude that "(1) the offense is a lesser included offense of the one with which he or she is charged and (2) based on the evidence presented at trial, the jury could rationally find that the state failed to prove an element of the greater that distinguishes it from the lesser." Fisher, 141 Ariz. at 247 (emphasis added); see also Dugan, 125 Ariz. at 195 ("The determination which must be made before the lesser included instruction is proper is whether on the evidence the jury could rationally find that the state failed to prove an element of the greater offense."). The answer is yes only if, based on that body of evidence, "the jury could rationally find that the state failed to prove an element of the greater offense" — the element that "necessarily distinguishes the greater from the lesser." Dugan, 125 Ariz. at 195–96. In other words, an instruction on the lesser offense is contingent on a shortcoming in the prosecution's evidence in support of the greater offense—never on findings in a separate body of evidence.

3. Rule 403 and the Due Process Clause bar the State's attempt.

The Court need not decide this question in the abstract. Here, the evidence the State seeks to introduce is so disconnected from the charged crime, so voluminous, so misleading, and so prejudicial to the Defense that Rule 403 and the Due Process Clause impose a clear bar. See Defendant's Response to State's Motion for Reconsideration, filed 2/22/11, at 6–7. The Court's ruling excluding this evidence remains correct.

C. Permitting the State to introduce the evidence at this late date would violate Mr. Ray's right to notice, Due Process, and fundamental fairness.

The State's Bench Memorandum, and the argument that the prior sweat lodge evidence should be admitted under the banner of negligent homicide, come far too late. Arizona Rule of Criminal Procedure 16.1(b) provides that "[a]ll motions shall be made no later than 20 days prior to trial, or at such other time as the court may direct." Ariz. R. Crim. P. 16.1(b). This rule applies to "all motions capable of decision prior to trial," id. cmt., and the motion deadline in this case was December 27, 2010. In accordance with this rule, the State noticed its intent to introduce evidence from prior sweat lodges as 404(b) evidence, and the parties timely, and extensively, litigated the issue. The Court ruled on the issue on February 3, 2011, one month in advance of trial. Mr. Ray prepared his defense specifically in accordance with the Court's ruling and based on the theory of admissibility supplied by the State at the time of the ruling.

Notwithstanding the resolution of the issue of prior sweat lodge evidence, the State repeatedly (almost daily) attempts to revisit the Court's ruling—sometimes in direct requests for reconsideration, sometimes through various newfangled and flawed theories of relevance or "door-opening", and sometimes by simply reiterating the very arguments the court has rejected as if the Court's ruling did not exist. See, e.g., Draft Trial Transcript, 3/25/11 at 49:16–50:7 ("[W]hat we know the truth is that Mr. Ray knew all those things could happen they had happened in past events. So this line of questioning goes to Mr. Ray's level of knowledge about what could happen in the sweat lodge in 2009 . . . in fact Mr. Ray [knows] that much worse things can happen because they did in fact happen"); id. at 45:13–22 ("We know that Mr. Ray knowingly did not give them a fair presentation of what would happen. He did not tell participants about problems in the past and that has been his pattern. He [inaudible] the problems from the past and he continues to gather collect large sums of money from participants to come to

&lt;sup>5</sup> See State's Motion for Reconsideration of Ruling on MIL No. 1, filed 2/14/11. The State has also made repeated oral motions for reconsideration. See, e.g., Draft Trial Transcript, 3/2/11, at 9:11–13 ("The state<sup>5</sup> is renewing the request, the motion to reconsider the admissibility of the 404(b) acts.").

But the State was required to raise all of its arguments related to the prior sweat lodge evidence prior to trial. The arguments are thus long precluded: "[a]ny motion, defense, objection, or request not timely raised under Rule 16.1(b) shall be precluded, unless the basis therefor was not then known, and by the exercise of reasonable diligence could not then have been known, and the party raises it promptly upon learning of it." Id. 16.1(c). The State has had over a year to fashion its arguments, and there is no legal justification for its choice to now litigate these issues during trial.

Arizona courts take seriously the restrictions set forth in Rule 16, which are designed to protect the interests of orderly procedure, finality, and notice of the issues to be addressed at trial. Courts routinely reject motions and requests made after the deadline. See, e.g., State v. Guytan, 192 Ariz. 514 (1998) (prosecutor's motion to amend indictment, filed more than one week after the trial had begun, to allege gang motivation for purpose of sentence enhancement, was untimely, and untimely filing was not justified, where prosecutor had previously known that there were gang overtones to case); City of Tucson v. Arndt, 125 Ariz. 607, 609 (where prosecutor's motion for leave to amend charging document to add allegation of prior conviction was filed one day late based on 20-days-before-trial computation, "untimeliness was a proper basis" for the court's denial of the motion); State v. Stoglin, 116 Ariz. 90, 94 (under Rule 16.1(c), prosecutor waived objection to defense evidence known to prosecutor prior to trial by failing to timely and properly raise it). See also State v. Lee, 25 Ariz. App. 220, 223 (App. 1975) (noting that the requirement of timely motions serves the goal of "the reduction of unnecessary and repetitious hearings and trials").

Moreover, adherence to Rule 16.1(b) and (c) is intertwined with a criminal defendant's constitutional rights to Due Process a fair trial. As the United States Supreme Court has explained, "[i]n a variety of contexts, our cases have repeatedly emphasized the importance of giving the parties sufficient notice to enable them to identify the issues on which a decision may turn." Lankford v. Idaho, 500 U.S. 110, 126 (1991); see id. ("Notice of issues to be resolved by -9-the adversary process is a fundamental characteristic of fair procedure."). In the context of this case, Mr. Ray is entitled to meaningful notice of the boundaries of this case, and of the evidentiary rulings that will govern the trial, at a time when he can prepare his defense accordingly. Moreover, Mr. Ray is entitled to an orderly trial in which this Court's rulings have meaning and are respected. The State's relentless attempts to introduce evidence that has been ruled inadmissible, all without showing the good cause that Rule 16.1(d) requires, and its far-too-late attempts to devise new theories of admissibility that should have been raised prior to trial, are improper and unfair.

A criminal trial is not a free-for-all. This Court must serve its constitutionally mandated role of gatekeeper of evidence and arbiter of procedural and evidentiary rules, and should proscribe the State's drumbeat of both explicit and back-door reconsideration efforts. Failure to restrain the State's relentless attack on this Court's prior rulings raises a very substantial risk of mistrial and special action.

III. CONCLUSION

The State's belated and misleading attempt to introduce evidence that is not relevant to the reckless manslaughter charge on the theory that it is relevant to negligent homicide must fail. The evidence is not relevant to a negligent homicide charge; the doctrine of lesser included offenses, does not permit the prosecution to introduce evidence that is not also relevant to the charged, greater offense; and Rule 16.1 and the constitutional requirements of Due Process and a fair trial forbid the State's relentless and belated attempts to alter the basis of this trial. The Court should restrain the State's reckless attempts to drive this case into mistrial and special action.

1	THE COURT Ms Polk where do you think that	1	ambulance personnel something like this. This is
2	statement came from You said it was an unknown	2	actually the states evidence  The second piece of
3	^ mail ^ male	. 3	evidence that we have that supports that this is an
4	the respond /ERZ isn't that the states belief	4	he am it who is saying this and that this happened
5	MS. POLK I don't know where it came from	5	despite the fact the state is now we have no idea
6	Your Honor The transcript says unknown	6	what this is this could have been anybody offer the
7	^ mail ^ male	7	street. The other fact is that I sat in eye room
8	MR KELLY Judge dawn foster last week said	8	with Mr. Hughes and a witness about a week and a
9	it was an he am is	9	half ago a woman which the name of dawn Gordon
10	THE COURT I don't want interrupt I-GS I	10	^ who is ^ whose on the prosecution witness
11	give people an opportunity to respond Ms Polk	11	^ list ^ lift and I took 10 minutes with her,
12	MS POLK Your Honor I don't know who said	12	because she was at the interview and she's
13	it I know that the /HRAUPLTS does not know who	13	^ lifted ^ listed as somebody who was in the dining
14	said it. We don't believe and I'm looking at	14	hail I played it for her Did you hear something
15	Detective Diskin because I don't want to mislead	15	like this and she said yes, I did Now I would be
16	the court but we don't know of any law enforcement	16	very interested to see if the state is actually
17	person that said it, is that correct	17	still going to call her, okay. But it is not
18	THE COURT Mr Kelly just on that Mr Li	18	factually correct that the state has no idea where
19	What the the indication it came from an authority	19	this tape came from or who might have been talking
20	first respond /ER type authority	20	You only have to look at it and listen to it to
21	MR LI I'll give you two pieces of	21	understand that when somebody says we'll come back
22	information since I handled this particular issue	22	I think you can draw a fair inference that that's
23	The first is what this is. This is sort of between	23	an he am it or ambulance driver because he's saying
24	vanous interviews I think it's Michael bar	24	/TPHEB gets worse either go to the hospital or call
25	/PWERZ interview Mr Bar /PWER is being	25	nine one /KWUPB and we'll come back I think it's
		58	60
1	interviewed by a detective. The detective's tin	1	a fair /EUP /TPREPBS to /KRAU draw I think it's
2	/TER view is interrupted by this person who comes	2	also a fair inference to draw from the /TPAPBGT the
3	in I've got it cued up. He says all right	3	knowledge with which which this person is speaking
4	everybody, I mean, if you want to listen to it	4	They are symptoms of organo-phosphates nausea
5	THE COURT I recall something of that My	5	vomiting headache. Everything these people had. I
6	only question is you have a reason to believe it	6	think you can draw a fair inference from that that
7	came from authority an he am is he am it or first	7	it's an he am it personnel
8	responder fire official	8	THE COURT Mr Li you've covered this
9	THE WITNESS /HR*EUR I have two reasons one	9	MR LI Thank you
10	is circumstantial evidence. One is just the guy	10	THE COURT. I don't find anything improper
11	comes in and says that we're checking into that	11	just in open question. Again it didn't have
12	We're not exactly sure, could have been some	12	anything to do with the truth of that It had to
13	/KROPLS with maybe some /O*GZ that were /O*GZ that	13	do with were people following LEDs in the early
14	were mixed in some how. We're cheek /-G an unknown	14	going and how wide spread was this notion were
15	fee /AEUL /SPHA some a female says what sort of	15	people being told. I don't want to go into why it
16	/SEUPL /SOPLZ and the response is nausea vomiting	16	might be more or less relevant. That's what that
17	headaches everything you have, if it doesn't get	17	question was about. We don't need to discuss. I
18	better. The good news is that the patient that are	18	don't find anything improper about that question
19	there they're coming in already improving just keep	19	The the other issue is much more difficult and
20	an eye on that and on each other if anybody gets	20	Ms. Polk, here's the problem. The asking question
21	worse, either go to the hospital or call 9-1-1 and	21	Are going to suggest there was anything like /A
22	we'll come back Okay We'll come back So I	22	what happened in /TWOEPB from the 2009 from /-D the
23	don't have a videotape of this person speaking, but	23	/-D the evidence I've sign would be very list
24	we'll come back suggests very strong think that the	24	misleading. One person went to the hospital over
25	person that's discussing this is an he am it	25	the period of years with a none life threatening

1	condition The other problem is the 404(b)	1	/STKPWHR*RPBLGTS Ms Do
2	testimony was on a whole different standard of	2	MS DO Thank you, Your Honor Well, with
3	proof I found clear and convincing that certain	3	respect to the lawsuit against Angel Valley the
4	instances happened. They were relatively isolated	4	state did provide me with a copy of that this
5	There wasn't a lot of specificity Any incidents	5	morning At this point I don't anticipate a need
6	that become the subject of testimony would have to	6	to use this or reference the lawsuit against Angel
7	also include knowledge by Mr. Ray. So to go into	7	Valley in my cross-examination. But without having
8	that with this witness and suggest there might be	8	heard the direct il can't say that with any degree
9	just multiple people out there that Mr. Ray knew	9	of certainty I can just say I don't anticipate
10	about everybody that would be I don't see the	10	using unless something is opened up on direct
11	/SPWAEUS basis for that There might be a way,	11	With respect to Mr /RO anyone's lawsuit against
12	well, I don't wanted to go further I told you the	12	James Ray international Again I do not intend to
13	concern And I'm back to my initial yes is, you	13	offer any evidence /-FPT at there point I don't
14	can ask on redirect why he thinks it was proper	14	even even in /STEPBD to /KREFR /REPBS that in
15	, , ,	15	cross-examination unless something is gone into in
